NATIVE DAUGHTERS

Who they are, where they’ve been and why Indian Country could never survive without them.
Dedicated to spotlighting Native American women who have defied odds, broken the mold of stereotypes and brought the powerful traditional role of the Native American woman into the twenty-first century, the Native Daughters Project is a first of its kind created by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln’s College of Journalism and Mass Communication. These women create laws, create movies and write stories that weave tradition with technology. They fight crime on the front lines and corruption in the court rooms. They heal minds and bodies. These women make beautiful bead work and music and blaze trails by breaking gender constraints and leading their tribes. And until now, their stories were untold.

The curriculum on this disc was written by teachers. Teachers who know that engaging students is just as important as complying with state standards. This curriculum was written for teachers. Content rich, standards aligned, engaging lessons are just a click away. And don’t fear, so is all the background knowledge you will need to teach your students about these Native Daughters.

PROCEDURAL NOTES

Native Daughters is a starting point for incorporating and integrating Native American culture and the issues facing Native American women currently and historically to enlighten students. It is not intended to be an exhaustive curriculum for teaching about Native Americans past, present or future. There are 500-plus recognized tribes across the United States. In order to understand Native history and culture, it is essential to understand Native American women.

The target audience for this curriculum is grades 4-12. However, all the lessons are written so they can be adapted to any grade level.

In this curriculum guide, you will first find a summary of each unit attached to each theme. Then you will find a set of lesson plans that corresponds with the seven themes in the Native Daughters magazine, which was produced by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Journalism and Mass Communications. These lesson plans are comprehensive and include all the information you will need to feel confident presenting the material. This information includes: objectives, connections to Nebraska state standards, curricular integration, materials/supplies needed, suggested vocabulary, essential and discussion questions, activity directions, and assessment ideas. To help you also feel more knowledgeable additional resources may also be listed.

Teachers are advised to preview any materials, particularly video pieces before showing in class. Online resources should be checked to see if district firewalls allow access. All materials should be reviewed to make sure that they comply with district policy.

FUNDING FOR THIS PUBLICATION

This curriculum companion is a product of a Nebraska Humanities Council grant in partnership with the Nebraska Department of Education’s office of multicultural/diversity education and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln’s College of Journalism and Mass Communications, which produced the Native Daughters magazine, website and documentary.

Mail: Joe Starita, 239 Andersen Hall, Lincoln, NE 68588-0443
LESSON OBJECTIVES

Students will:
- learn about the legal issues facing Native American people on and off the reservation.
- examine the issues of American Indian mascots in sports and product logos.
- learn about the history of women’s roles and positions in tribal societies and how they have changed.
- learn about one woman’s struggle to overcome obstacles and fulfill her dream of becoming an attorney.

SUMMARY
From disputes over land and domestic abuse prosecution to the use of Native American images and symbols by sports teams, Native women face a number of legal challenges on and off the reservation. Some are fighting these struggles within the system as attorneys and others work as activists.

BACKGROUND KNOWLEDGE
- Familiarize yourself with the various U.S. laws mentioned in Lesson 2 regarding land ownership and jurisdiction.
- View the videos and explore the websites suggested in Lesson 4 regarding the controversy of Native American mascots.
- Read the Lawgivers section in the Native Daughters magazine.

UNIT TOPICS
1. Profile-The life of Danelle Smith
2. Understanding the Changing Role of Women in Native American Society
3. Native American Mascots and their impact on society
4. Jurisdictional Issues: better understanding who’s in charge

LESSON PLANS
- Native American Women in Law
- Who’s in Charge? Jurisdiction, Conflict, and Responsibility on the Reservation
- The Changing Role of Women in Native American Society
- Native American Mascots: Sports Teams and Product Logos

EVALUATION/ASSESSMENT
Included in the lesson plans
LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will:
• learn about Native American viewpoints concerning the environment, historically and in contemporary society.
• chart the significant historical issues that contributed to decreases and increases in Traditional Native American Knowledge.
• interpret the results of a science experiment on water pollution.
• analyze Native American points of view on water use and concerns for the future.
• read about and discuss green economy issues and give examples of “green jobs.”

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION
Science, Language Arts, Social Studies, Career Education

SUMMARY
The practice of responsible environmental stewardship is embedded in the Native way of life. This viewpoint is portrayed in the articles “Standing Her Ground” and “Land on Life Support.” The concept of Seven Generations, for Native people, involves looking back seven generations to what the ancestors did for the people now, then accepting the same responsibility they carried, to ensure a healthy environment for the seven generations to come. “Everything in our creation is our relative. Earth, Water, Air, and all the standing silent nation – we are all related,” White Plume says. “Part of our spiritual and social and political obligation is to protect our relatives.” Who better to tend mother Earth than Native Daughters?

UNIT TOPICS
• How environmental activists are working to protect natural resources
• Understanding traditional Native American ways of looking at the environment compared to mainstream views
• Experimenting to find out what water pollution is and how it affects the water we use daily
• Exploring the concept of “green jobs” and how they can impact society.

LESSON PLANS
• Connecting to the Environment
• Water Pollution
• Jobs of the Future: Going Green

EVALUATION/ASSESSMENT
Included in lesson plans.
LESSON OBJECTIVES

Students will:
• look at scientific endeavor as a personal issue.
• address the issues of public health faced by communities today, investigate the roles of Western and Native medicines in society today.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION

Science, Career Education, Social Studies and Language Arts

UNIT SUMMARY

This unit deals with women healers both past and present, some of their contributions to society as a whole and certainly their contributions to Indian Country. Ethnobotany, Native medicine Western medicine and Public Health as well as potential career ideas are all a part of this unit.

LESSON PLANS

• Women of Medicine in History
• Western vs. Native Medicine
• Public Health and My Community

EVALUATION/ASSESSMENT

• Reading summaries
• Discussion questions
• Presentations

LESSON OBJECTIVES

Students will:
• analyze and examine gender roles.
• discuss cultural differences of women in uniform.
• study virtues of Native cultures.
• learn about the history of the White Mountain Apaches, the resources and perils of living in a mountainous forest region and the experiences of women on the Apache 8 Wild Lands fire crew.
• explore what it takes to accomplish goals, how stereotypes and biases may get in the one’s way, and what resources and steps are needed to be successful.
• analyze the role of ceremonies and the importance of being part of a community in self-determination.
• apply ideas about strength in character, determination and dedication to their own lives.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION

Social Studies, Language Arts

UNIT SUMMARY

These lessons examine the term of “warrior” and challenge stereotypes of culture and gender. Women are profiled in these lessons who hold nontraditional roles. They are military veterans, police officers and firefighters. Students will be challenged to better understand the contributions these women have made while also examining Lakota virtues and having discussions related to both traditional concepts associated with the U.S. military.

UNIT TOPICS

• Native women in the military
• Profile of a female tribal police officer fighting against in-justice, standing up for principles
• Using camaraderie and cultural ties to strengthen skills to perform dangerous male-dominated roles

LESSON PLANS

• Defending their Country, Honoring their Culture
• Daring to Defy: Darla black
• Other Native Daughters in Uniform: The Apache 8

EVALUATION/ASSESSMENT

Students will complete a variety of activities within the lessons that will demonstrate their research, analysis, and recall skills.
LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will
• identify leadership skills and self assess their own leadership qualities.
• compare and contrast European ways of leadership and governance with Traditional ways of leadership and governance.
• develop a better understanding of the importance of women’s leadership in traditional society.
• define tribal sovereignty and discuss the rights and responsibilities associated with tribal sovereignty.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION
Social Studies (History, Government, Sociology, Women’s Studies, Social Justice), Language Arts, Career Education

SUMMARY
The theme of Leadership crosses all of seven of the Native Daughters themes because all of the women profiled in this magazine are leaders in various ways. The lessons in this theme will highlight what leadership looks like while helping students better understand how European influence changed leadership roles of women in Native American tribes and why it has been such a long fight to reassert the importance of the leadership of women. This theme will also further discuss the complexities of Tribal governance and leadership. European influence also impacted overall tribal governance and leadership and in many ways has lead to the on-going social ills that are impacting Native Daughters in particular and Native American people as a whole today.

UNIT TOPICS
• Qualities of a Leader
• Traditional Roles of Native American Women
• European Influence on women’s roles and tribal governance
• Modern Native American women leaders

LESSON PLANS
• Identifying and Developing Leadership Skills
• Native American Women in Leadership Roles
• Tribal Governance and Sovereignty

EVALUATION/ASSESSMENT
Variety of authentic assessments used for the lessons.

TEACHING NOTES:
ACTIVITY 1 FOOT PRINTS IN THE SNOW Prior to reading, have students visualize the article as snow. Let them know that as they read they will leave their foot prints in the snow (margins). As they read, have them write down their thoughts. It could be questions such as why, what, the wow I didn’t know that, I wonder, text to text, self, world connections etc. You just want them to leave their thoughts behind as they read.

After reading the article pull together as a whole class and discuss the ah-ha moments they had while reading the article. What are some questions they had, what kind of connections did they make to the article, etc. Make sure students have the opportunity to share their thoughts and ideas.

ACTIVITY 2 COMPARING GENRE’S USING A CREATIVE NONFICTION ARTICLE Compare Genre’s using a creative nonfiction article. Split students into small 3 to 4 person groups. Give each group a piece of poster board; they will divide it into three columns. Have them label the first column fiction, the second column news writing or feature news article and the third column creative nonfiction. Student will fill in each column with genre specific characteristics. How is each genre unique?

• Once the charts are complete direct students attention to you again.
• Have them re-read the article about Danelle Smith.
• In their groups, give them 5 to 10 minutes to discuss how the story of Danelle Smith fits the characteristics of the three different genres on their chart. As they work they will circle the characteristics that apply and in their group decide which genre best fits this article.
• Review the parts of creative nonfiction and discuss the definition and characteristics. Compare this to what students came up with.

ACTIVITY 3 LIFE PLOT Refer to the story cycle of people (http://sivers.org/drama) to better understand how a life plot works. Then go back to the article and use the life plot chart to illustrate the high and low points of Danelle’s life. Show and discuss the path she took to success and the struggles she encountered.
• Explain the assignment. Each class member will create their own life plot.
• They will take the main points from their life plot and write their own creative nonfiction story. Each student should use good word choice that gives voice to their story. The story should contain interesting or unique information about the author.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Students will demonstrate their understanding of these issues by presenting the information they have gathered in the form of a project to be determined by the teacher. Ideas include: a short video, a PowerPoint or Prezi presentation, a written paper (news article, research paper, feature story, etc.) A rubric can be used to evaluate these projects. It should focus on completeness and accuracy of information, background information, variety of perspectives and opinions, supported material, etc. Website resource for creating rubrics http://rubistar.4teachers.org.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Interview a teacher: ask specific questions about their college experience.
2. Write a creative nonfiction article about that teacher’s life struggles in getting to college and completing college.
“Law Enforcement, as a whole, is trained not to segregate by skin color. In this area, that’s not possible.”

—Chris Kleinberg
Thurston County Sheriff

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

It is recommended that prior to teaching this lesson the teacher explore the Tribal Court Clearing House: A Project of the Tribal Law and Policy Institute website to become familiar with laws that pertain to Native Americans. In particular pay attention to the legal status of Native American people in the eyes of the U.S. government, the history, intent and complications of reservations and treaties, and all laws that have impacted the lives of Native Americans over the past 200 years.

ACTIVITY 1 LAND GRAB/CLAIMING SIMULATION

1. Split the class in half. All students leave the room. Half come back in and are told to “claim” all of the items in the room, including the personal possessions of the students in the hall, by placing sticky notes on anything they want. The notes should have their own names on them. Invite other students back into the room and inform them that the chairs, desks, backpacks, personal property, etc. no longer belong to them, because they have been “discovered” by the other students who found them unused. The hallway students will now have to sit in a small corner of the room with limited resources to be decided on by the classroom students. Classroom students can also generate a list of rules for both groups. Hallway students will have no input. What are the options for the hallway students? What can they do to change the situation?

2. Have students describe their feelings in small groups, on paper, or as a large group. How is this similar to what happened to Native people when Europeans came? What can Native American people do to change their situations? Some tribes have been more successful than others at doing that. What are some differences and similarities in their efforts? Why have some tribes been more successful?

ACTIVITY 2 RESEARCH/PRESENT

Have student research each of the federal laws (listed above) that affected Native American sovereignty and jurisdiction. Create a timeline illustrating the changes and the effects on tribal self-determination.

ACTIVITY 3 BREAKING THE RULES

Have students create classroom rules for the day and write them down. Have new students who don’t know the rules come in and violate them. What happens? Who is responsible for giving out punishment (who has jurisdiction)? What are the consequences for the students who break the unknown rules? Do they have any recourse—any way to challenge the punishment or the rules? How is this similar to what happens on the reservation between Native and non-Native residents/visitors?

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. What was the intent of creating “reservations” for Native American people?
2. Why did the U.S. government designate land for reservations?
3. Why did tribes agree to give up their land and live on reservations?
4. Who originally lived on them?
5. Today who can own land on a reservation?
6. What are the problems that come with the new laws?
7. Who has authority on the reservations? How has that authority changed over time?
8. Cite at least one example from the text of a situation where jurisdiction dispute/confusion caused safety issue.
LESSON 2: WHO’S IN CHARGE? JURISDICTION, CONFLICT, AND RESPONSIBILITY ON THE RESERVATION

VOCABULARY
• Reservation
• Treaty
• Allotment
• Sovereignty
• Self-determination

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Students will demonstrate their understanding of these issues by presenting the information they have gathered in the form of a project to be determined by the teacher. Ideas include: a short video, a PowerPoint or Prezi presentation, a written paper (news article, research paper, feature story, etc.). A rubric can be used to evaluate these projects. It should focus on completeness and accuracy of information, background information, variety of perspectives and opinions, supported material, etc. Website resource for creating rubrics http://rubistar.4teachers.org.

LESSON 3: THE CHANGING ROLE OF WOMEN IN NATIVE AMERICAN SOCIETY

LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will:
• learn about the history of the various important and powerful roles that Native American women played in tribal societies.
• see that there are many Native American women today in positions of power in a variety of areas.
• examine and evaluate the reasons for the changes in Native American women’s roles over the years.
• research the current opportunities for all women today as well as what areas are still not completely open or equal.
• learn about the challenges and difficulties faced by Native American women on and off the reservations.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
• History of the variety of roles, powers, and responsibilities of Native Americans.
• Statistics related to abuse against women on and off the reservation.
• Indian Reorganization Act of 1934: Gave only men the right to negotiate with the U.S. government. (http://www.maquah.net/kafkaesque/IndianCourt/IRA.htm)
• Treaty of New Echota (1835): Only men signed the treaty that paved the way for Trail of Tears. (http://ourgeorgiahistory.com/documents/treaty_of_new_echota.html)
• Public Law 280 (1953): Took authority away from federal powers and gave them to 6 states (although it affects 51 percent of tribes in the contiguous U.S. and Alaska. (http://www.tribal-institute.org/lists/pl280.htm)

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Visuals: Make a chart, graph, or poster, PPT, Prezi, Video about one of the topics from the readings. Make a chart, graph, or poster to show the difference in law enforcement budgets mentioned on page 14. Make a chart, graph, or poster showing the statistics from page 17 related to physical & sexual abuse, and assault for Native American women vs. non-Native women.
2. Perform: Write/Sing a song, write/recite a poem, give a report about a topic or person from the reading that inspired you.
3. Textbook Evaluation: On page 12, Astrid Munn describes the way history textbooks address (or don’t address) the powers and roles of Native American women before Europeans arrived. Get a sample of American history textbooks from your school and evaluate them to see how Native American women are portrayed. Are they mentioned at all? How complete is the information? What could be included/added? Write a review of the book and present your critique to your Social Studies teachers/administrators.
4. Quiz: Make a quiz to test the knowledge of your classmates (and school staff) about Native American women throughout history and today.
5. Mock Court: Role play a court room scene about a particular case (either historical or fictional) assigning parts for all participants - judge, attorneys, plaintiffs, jury, etc. Ask the class to be the jury and render a verdict.
LESSON 3: THE CHANGING ROLE OF WOMEN IN NATIVE AMERICAN SOCIETY

PRE-READING QUESTIONS
Brainstorm and write answers on board.
2. Where did these ideas and images come from? (TV, movies, personal experience, etc.)?
3. Look at the photo on pages 12 and 13 in the Native Daughters magazine. Without reading the caption, what occupations do you think each of these women hold? Explain your reasons.
4. What occupations/careers do you think were available to Native American women in the past? (Pre- and Post Contact with Europeans)
5. What occupations/careers do you think are available to Native American women today? (Pre- and Post Contact with Europeans)
6. What challenges might Native American women have faced/continue to face in the pursuit of their dreams?

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS
1. Describe the roles of women in the dominant society today. How do they differ from the roles available to women in the past?
2. On pages 12-14, Astrid Munn gives some examples of the powers and responsibilities that Native American women had before Europeans came. What caused the change in the role of women in Native American societies?
3. Do you think women have equal opportunities today in terms of occupations, powers, and responsibilities? Why? Why not? Give examples to support your ideas.
4. In the video segment on the website, Karen Arichoker (http://cojmc.unl.edu/nativedaughters/law_givers/native-are-women-fighting-for-their-rights-and-their-lives) talks about some of the negative influences experienced by Native American men during WWII. How does she say those experiences affect the relationships between Native American men and women?
5. To what extent do you think these same kinds of problems might be occurring today with veterans returning from current conflicts?

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Interview/Skype a variety of Native American women from different backgrounds (on the reservation, in the city, professionals, caretakers, etc.) Have students generate questions to ask the women. Have students write a story about the women and their experiences. (See the Resources section of the Native Daughters magazine on page 134 for suggestions.)
2. Have students interview female teachers, staff at your school to get their stories. Share their thoughts with the rest of the class. Video?
3. Encourage students to see women in general (and Native American women in particular) in a wide variety of positions.
4. Do research to find Native American women “firsts” in a variety of categories. The first doctor, dentist, college professor, actress, police officer, soldier, etc.
5. Have students interview a female in their own lives and create a written story or video about her. Have them ask questions about how they came to be where they are today (regardless of their situation and/or occupation).
6. What challenges did they face? How did they overcome them?
7. What (if anything) would they have done differently?
8. What advice do they have for young women today?

ASSESSMENTS/EVALUATION Students will demonstrate their understanding of these issues by presenting the information they have gathered in the form of a project to be determined by the teacher. Ideas include: a short video, a PowerPoint or Prezi presentation, a written paper (news article, research paper, feature story, etc.)

RUBRIC Focus on completeness and accuracy of information, background information, variety of perspectives and opinions, supported materials, etc. Website resource for creating rubrics: http://rubistar.4teachers.org.

Kate Quinn (pg. 18)

Lesson Objectives

- Students will
  - Understand issues and controversies surrounding the use of Native American people and symbols in sports teams and product logos.
  - Become familiar with court cases and legislation regarding the use of Native American mascots.
  - Read about and listen to a variety of different views and arguments (pro and con) about Native American mascots.
  - Form their own opinions and conclusions about the use of Native American mascots based on their findings.

Curriculum Integration

Language Arts, Social Studies

Materials Needed

- Video: In Whose Honor? excerpt http://www.safeshare.tv/w/rthNLkKcR
- Pictures of Native American mascots
- Political Cartoons
- SEPA Role Model Posters
- Mascots That Honor Indians: The Audacity of a Dope for Suggesting Schools Change Their Indian Mascots – By Edouardo Zendejas

Essential Questions

1. Is it appropriate for sports teams to use Native American people as mascots? Why? Why not?
2. What are the arguments for and against?
3. What could you do to educate others about this issue?

Background Information

Why is this lesson here? In the past mascots have been used to portray Native peoples as less than human by putting them in the same category as animal mascots. Native American mascots give others the opportunity to continue to portray Native peoples in unfavorable lights. Stereotypes are perpetuated and sometimes tribal people are portrayed as silly or foolish because of the antics or caricature of the mascot. Hence the need for discussion with students about this issue.

1. History of the use of Native American as mascots
2. Court cases and legal decisions
3. List of high schools in U.S. that still have Native American mascots
4. Arguments for and against the use of Native American mascots

Activity 1 Journal Write/Response

1. Allow the students two-minutes to write down everything they know about Native American people on a sheet of paper or in a response journal.
2. Next show image of Native American Mascot (http://neveryetmelted.com/wp-images/illiniwek.jpg). As students to write about what they think as they see the person. What does the image communicate to them about Native American people?
4. What are some differences between these two photos?
5. When do you ever see Native American people in movies or television as typical characters? Do you see Native American people portrayed as doctors, lawyers, store clerks, police officers, nurses, professionals, parents, etc.? Why are they often only portrayed in a historical or stereotypical context? You could use the SEPA posters or the Montana department of Education role model posters to extend the discussion of this lesson.

Activity 2 Class Discussion

Should sports teams use Indian people or symbols as mascots? Why or why not?

Activity 3 Video

Watch short video/clips from In Whose Honor? Ask students to work in groups of 3 or 4 to discuss the issue. They should discuss whether or not Native American mascots are appropriate and try to come to consensus. Have students come back and report findings/conclusions to the rest of the class.

Activity 4 Research

Give students a list of the 500+ federally recognized tribes, broken down into regions. In pairs or small groups have students do an internet image search for contemporary Native American people. Assign each group a region of the country. Have them identify and find images from each tribe located in their region. Share results with large group.

Activity 5 Interviewing

1. Have students contact a variety of students from a school that has a Native American Mascot and interview (via Skype) them about the issue. Do the same with students from their own school.
2. Have students record interviews and create a short video piece about the topic of mascots.
3. Have students write a story including the quotes from people interviewed along with research information.
LESAON 4: SPORTS TEAMS AND PRODUCT LOGOS

PRE-READING QUESTIONS
1. What is a mascot?
2. What is its purpose?
3. Who decides what mascot to use for a particular team?
4. Do you know of any teams that use Native American people or objects as their mascot? List as many as you can.
5. Are there any teams that use other human beings for mascots? List them.

VOCABULARY WORDS
• Mascot
• Logo
• Depict

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS
1. List as many products as you can that use Native American people or symbols as logos.
2. How do you feel about the issue of using Native American Indian people and objects as sports team mascots?
3. Why do you think some Native (and non-Native) people object to American Indian mascots? Why do others support their use?
4. What are the arguments for and against?
5. How do you think non-Native people would react to their sports teams using racial symbolism relating to Hispanic, Black or Asian cultures?
6. What are some of the reasons sports teams resist changing their mascots to non-Native people/symbols?
7. Do you know of any schools in your state/area that use/used Native American mascots?
8. Do you know of any that have changed to non-Native mascots? Why did they change?

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Students will demonstrate their understanding of these issues by presenting the information they have gathered in the form of a project to be determined by the teacher. Ideas include: a short video, a PowerPoint or Prezi presentation, a written paper (news article, research paper, feature story, etc.). A rubric can be used to evaluate these projects. It should focus on completeness and accuracy of information, background information, variety of perspectives and opinions, supported material, etc.

Lesson 1: Valerie Red-Horse: Her Story

Summary: This lesson focuses on the life of Valerie Red-Horse. Students will read her life story and discuss the format in which it is written.

Lesson Objectives:
Students will:
• understand the rich and complex contributions made by a Native woman.
• preview and read non-fiction text.
• write in a script style format about their lives.

Curriculum Integration:
Social Studies, Reading, English

Materials Needed:
• Native Daughters magazine
• Computer with internet to view video and access lesson materials
• Handout: Script Organizer

Essential Questions:
1. Why are filmmaking and storytelling powerful media for Native Americans?
2. Why is it important to maintain cultural identity?

Vocabulary Words:
• Previewing
• Non-fiction
• Homogeneous
• Stereotyping
• Script
• Activist
• Entrepreneur

Background Information:
Become familiar with the background of Valerie Red-Horse by reading the article about her in the Native Daughters magazine and by viewing the short video about her on the Native Daughters website. The additional resources section of this lesson also provides the link to the Native American Public Telecommunications documentary Choctaw Code Talkers, which also features a short interview with her.

Day 1 Directions:
Who has learned something by watching movies and documentaries?
• Show website video to class to introduce Valerie Red-Horse. Discuss her views on Native art and her belief that film and storytelling are powerful mediums. Possible discussion questions: How can film and narrative storytelling show others who Natives are? What did Valerie mean when she said, “We are not homogeneous?” Why is diversity in film and stories important? Why did Valerie mention the Holocaust and World War II?
• Discuss organization of article on pages 20-27. How is this article organized? Why did the author write it like a script? How are scripts used and organized? Look at another article in Native Daughters. What differences do you see in the structure of the articles?
• Preview the article. Ask students to read the title, headings, captions and look at photos. What other text features are used to tell Valerie’s story?

Day 2 Directions:
Read the article about Valerie Red-Horse, pages 22-27, “Writing Her Own Script” (The Valerie Red-Horse story) as a class.
• Watch Valerie’s video (http://vimeo.com/9679223)
• Discuss the lessons Valerie learned as a result of her work on the documentary.
• Assign students to write one act of their own lives with three scenes. They can choose any part of their lives for a focus (for example, school years, family life, special interests like sports and music). Teacher could write and share an example of one act from his/her own life.

Day 3 Directions:
Finish writing Act One.
• Share Act One in small groups.
• Now that students have written Act One of their lives, what do they imagine for Act Two? Ask students to brainstorm future goals and future plans and possible obstacles they will face.
• Write Act Two, containing scenes when students achieve goals and overcome obstacles.
• Rearrange small groups and share Act Two.

Assessment/Evaluation:
Were assignments completed? Did students share? Create a rubric to evaluate the completeness of the students’ writing and participation in both the creation of the one-act play and sharing with the class. http://rubistar.4teachers.org

Discussion Questions:
1. Why was Valerie Red-Horse’s story told in this magazine?
2. What kind of student was Valerie in high school?
3. How do you think the author gathered the information for this article?
4. Why did Valerie’s husband suggest she write for herself? Was that a good idea?
5. What were some of the obstacles Valerie faced in her career? How did she overcome them?
6. What did Valerie learn from working on the Navajo Code Talkers documentary?
7. Which of her films on the timeline would you most like to see?
8. What questions would you ask Valerie?
9. What lessons did you learn from Valerie’s story?
10. Why should we continue to express people’s stories through film and narrative storytelling?

Enrichment Ideas:
1. Watch a Native American documentary or movie made by Native Americans.
2. Invite a Native storyteller to visit the class and tell stories.
3. Teach storytelling and invite students to read or write stories and practice telling them orally.
4. Write play or script about a Native Daughter and/or act out play.

Resources:
SUMMARY This lesson focuses on the life of Valerie Red-Horse. Students will read her life story and discuss the format in which it is written.

LESSON OBJECTIVES

Students will
- learn about the life of Valerie Red-Horse, a Native American female leader.
- research and gather information using this article and Native Daughters videos on Valerie Red-Horse and share her story by creating a short documentary about her life.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION

Drama, English, Native American History, Social Studies

MATERIALS NEEDED

- Native Daughter magazine
- Internet access
- Video Camera
- iMovie or other editing software to upload video camera footage

VOCABULARY WORDS

- Documentary
- Edit
- Inspirational
- Obstacles
- Script
- Entrepreneur
- Activist
- Producer
- Director

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Does the documentary illustrate main events in Valerie’s life?

BACKGROUND INFORMATION:

- Read article on Valerie Red-Horse and visit her website to familiarize yourself with who she is.
- Watch short documentaries on YouTube to compare and see the final product of others.
- Familiarize yourself with iMovie or other movie editing software to be able to edit the film and create the documentary for your class.
- Based on number of students and willingness to go in front of the camera, teacher will select jobs before to determine what roles the students will play in the short film. You may do this as a group or prior. (Example of jobs: reporters/narrators, editor, camera person(s), scene set up crew, script writers, actors/actress in film, background music, etc.) All students may be the researchers/reporters in the beginning to compile important information and determine which highlights of her life are going to be portrayed in the documentary.
- Encourage many students possible to go in front of the camera to get everyone involved even if it is for a short time.
- Depending on class size, you may assign different scenes to small groups or make it together as one class project.

DAY 1 DIRECTIONS Read the article in the magazine Native Daughters titled “Writing Her Own Script- The Valerie Red-Horse Story” with the class. Discuss article: What challenges did Valerie face in her career? How did Valerie overcome obstacles? What information would you expect to see included in a documentary about Valerie Red-Horse?

- Discuss the differences between movies and documentaries. How are they different?
- Teacher can show examples of movies and documentaries if needed.
- Have students preview information on her website and any other information they can gather on her. (If computers are available it would be easier, if not, the teacher may print off other articles and information on Valerie Red-Horse).
- Determine who will do specific jobs in the short film and brainstorm all possible documentary ideas on the board and continue to be as creative as possible. Take the time here to discuss with the class how we can use film to share stories and as a form of expression. This is the time the class will determine exact ideas and process they want to use to complete the documentaries. View any online documentaries to gain ideas and knowledge.

DAY 2 DIRECTIONS Students research and decide as a class what specific information will be used in the documentary. Valerie is a very positive role model so make sure that students discuss what they learned from her story and how they can use art to express their own personal stories. Try to also put as many of your students’ own personal comments about Valerie on the documentary to share their thoughts on what they learned from her. The script from to help students organize the film is in the Appendix.

DAY 3 DIRECTIONS Assign jobs, gather props, review information, & place information in a sequence in the order it will be filmed. Finalize important details and review Valerie’s life so that students can share as much information as possible about her.

DAY 4 DIRECTIONS Continue filming and working on the documentary. Add any new ideas generated and take some time to reflect and make any changes needed. Encourage as many students as possible to get on camera and share what they learned from Valerie’s life.

DAYS 5 & 6 DIRECTIONS Begin editing process using movie editing program. Add music or pictures if needed. Ask school technology specialist to assist if your school has one. If not just follow the movie editing program steps to create the final product. Be creative as possible. Put documentary on YouTube to share with others and to inform them of Valerie’s inspirational story.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Does the documentary illustrate main events in Valerie’s life? Create a rubric to evaluate students’ participation in both the research and film project. http://rubistar.4teachers.org/
LESSON OBJECTIVES
Student will be introduced to the struggle of Native Artists concerning authenticity and fraud, understand history of Native rug making and generate a list of ideas to work with elders.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION
Social Studies, Language Arts

MATERIALS NEEDED
- Native Daughter magazine
- Smart board with internet or internet with projector

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS
1. What is the Indian Arts and crafts Act of 1990? How does it protect against counterfeit works of art?
2. Why is it important to distinguish between authentic and counterfeit Native American works of art?
3. This article is about Navajo rug making. What other forms of native American art may be counterfeit?

VOCABULARY WORDS
- Fraud
- Counterfeit
- Authentic

NEBRASKA STATE STANDARDS
Language Arts 8.15, 8.3.2, 8.3.3, 12.3-2, 12.3-3
Social Studies 8.4.3, 12.14

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
Familiarize yourself with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990. You can read about it on the Indian Arts and Crafts Board website. Also it is suggested that you read through the other areas of the website including the information on special rules for museum exhibitions and National Parks and the consumer tips section. There are also several publications by the IACB that you may find useful in your discussion with your students.

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Read article on page 37 titled, “The Fight Against Frauds" by Christina Devries. After reading article have your students explore the Indian Arts and Crafts Board website to learn more about laws that apply to the sale of Indian arts and crafts.
2. Discussion Questions
   a. How do Native artists struggle to compete with counterfeit pieces of artwork?
   b. How do Navajo women show leadership in their culture through this art form?
   c. Why is the Navajo rug making community suffering from this type of fraud?
   d. What are some Navajo communities doing to teach the younger generations about traditional rug making?
   e. Does the law to protect the Native artists rug weaving business? Is it effective? Why or why not?
3. Show students You Tube trailer about the movie, “Weaving Worlds” http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Nn9rObjPM2c
4. Discussion Questions
   a. How can we use the Internet to learn and understand more about other cultures?
   b. What was the main message of this short video we just watched?
   c. Do you feel it is important to bring these messages and stories to students?
5. Now show students another video to give another perspective about rug making [http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iXTJh37c&feature=related].
6. Discussion questions
   a. How did the Native elder learn to make the rugs?
   b. How is she using rug making to keep her tradition alive?
7. Now go back and re-read the article on page 37 titled, “The Fight Against Frauds" by Christina Devries.
8. Have students imagine they have the “Adopt an Elder” program in their community. Have students create a list of activities that would work successfully in their own community to keep their traditions and cultures alive.
9. Also teachers may have students research how to start an adopt an elder program. They can research how to get one started and teachers may challenge their class to start one in their own community.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Evaluate feedback from students during discussion questions. Collect the list of “Adopt an Elder” activities they can use in their own community.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Show students the movie, “Weaving Worlds” to class.
2. Bring in Native American speaker to tell history and information about this art.
3. Bring in rug making expert and practice rug making by having students weave their own rugs.
4. Bring in a Native American artist who can discuss his/her form of art and how counterfeit impacting his/her craft.

RESOURCES
1. Internet and articles on Navajo rug making
2. YouTube videos showing rug making process
LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will
• learn about Native American viewpoints concerning the environment, historically and in contemporary society.
• compare and contrast Native American viewpoints with mainstream environmental beliefs.
• research ways to connect to their own communities.
• chart the significant historical issues the contributed to decreases and increases in Traditional Native American Knowledge.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
In a historical context, Native Americans were strongly connected to their environments. Native women were regarded as sacred, like the Earth, and both were treated with the highest respect, as were all the elements, plants, and animals. After European colonization, the impact upon Native American communities resulted in a disconnection to the environment, which occurred over generations. Beginning in the 1970’s, Native American environmental and traditional knowledge began to resurface and grow throughout Indigenous communities in North America. Organizations such as Honor the Earth, the Indigenous Environmental Network, and the Seventh Generation Fund are at the forefront of this expanding revitalization. The Seventh Generation Fund derives its name from a precept of the Great Law of Peace of the Haudenosaunee (Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy) which mandates that chiefs consider the impact of their decisions on the seventh generation yet to come.

ACTIVITY 1
Students will read pages 40-56 of Native Daughters and explore the following websites and then answer discussion questions:
- Honor the Earth [http://www.honorearth.org]
- Indigenous Environmental Network [http://www.ienarth.org]
- Seventh Generation Fund [http://www.7genfund.org]

Discussion Questions
1. Why is traditional knowledge so important to Native Americans?
2. From this lesson, what have you learned about the Honor the Earth Organization and who founded it?
3. Why would many Native Americans not consider themselves environmentalists or activists?

ACTIVITY 2
Students will use information they gathered to create either a wordle [http://www.wordle.net] or gloster [http://edu.glogster.com] poster to express the main points of the articles. A rubric to evaluate this project is included in the Appendix.

ACTIVITY 3
TRADITIONAL KNOWLEDGE KEEPERS PIE CHART ACTIVITY
Since European contact, Native Americans have struggled to maintain their traditional beliefs, knowledge, and education. There are many historical events that were devastating to traditional knowledge. But more recently, there is a renewal and rebirth happening in Indian Country. Students will use a pie chart to indicate the significant historical issues that contributed to a decrease in traditional Native American knowledge. Then they will create a new pie chart to show the increase in traditional knowledge since the 1960’s. This activity will create a visual representation of those events. Pie chart workshops are in the Appendix.

Pie Chart 1 directions:
1. Title the first pie chart: Decrease in Native American Traditional Knowledge.
2. Divide the pie in half, and label the left half “Disease and Conflict.” Soon after Europeans arrived in the New World, immense numbers of Indigenous Americans began to die of these diseases. Then more Knowledge Keepers died in the American Indian Wars.
3. Divide the right side in four parts.
4. Label the first of these four parts “Forced Relocation.” Many Indian tribes were forced off of their traditional lands, and moved to geographic areas where their traditional knowledge was useless. In addition, many tribal members died during forced marches.
5. Label the second of these four parts “Assimilation policy and Indian Boarding Schools.” From 1790 to 1920 the US government sought to transform Native American culture to European-American culture. It was during this time that the government imposed bans on traditional practices. Learning the English language and converting to European religions was part of the assimilation process. Indian children were also forcibly removed from their families and placed in Indian Boarding Schools. These schools are mostly remembered for severe abuse and desecration of Native American language and culture.
6. Label the third of these four parts “Termination Era.” From 1953 to 1968, the government believed there were tribes who were ready to be main-streamed into American society. In that time period, 109 tribes were terminated, 2,500,000 acres of former trust land were sold to non-Indians, and 13,000 Native Americans lost their tribal affiliation.

7. Label the last part of the pie chart “Intergenerational Trauma-Poverty, Alcohol & Drugs.” Transmission of negative psychological issues is the result of the unresolved grief over many traumatic historical events.

Pie Chart 2 Directions

1. Title the second pie chart: Increase in Native American Traditional Knowledge.
2. Divide the second pie into four equal parts. Label the first part “Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968.” This act prohibits tribal governments from enacting or enforcing laws that violate individual rights. Before this act, a tribal member who did not like a tribal government decision had two choices, accept the decision or leave the tribe.
3. Label the second part “ISDEAA of 1974. (Indian Self-Determination and Educational Assistance Act) This act promotes self-determination in two areas through federal funding of services and education. Native American people can eventually assume control over programs and services administered by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.
4. Label the third part of the pie “American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978.” This was enacted to preserve traditional religious rights and cultural practices, which had been previously violated when practices conflicted with Federal regulations. It includes access to sacred sites, the use and possession of objects considered sacred, and the free exercise of Native American religions.
5. Label the fourth part “Contemporary Movement-Ongoing Efforts.” This involves the rebirth of Native American traditions in the 1980’s, the beginning of the healing process for intergenerational trauma in the 1990’s, and the push to revitalize traditional knowledge in the 2000’s, including the Esther Martinez Native American Languages Preservation Act of 2006.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Students will write a Reaction Journal entry in which they state 3 or more things about the pie chart activity that were “Aha! Moments” and then tell how each “Aha! Moment” changed his/her perception about Native American history.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS Watch any segment from the American Experience: We Shall Remain: America Through Native American Eyes series. Online access http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/amex/wellshallremain or the 2009 PBS three disc DVD set may be purchased.

“Without water there is no life. Contamination will affect us and our future generations as well.”

Debra White Plume, Oglala Lakota

Background Information
Read “Standing Her Ground” in Native Daughters pages 40-45 and “Land on Life Support” in Native Daughters pages 46-56. This lesson on Water Pollution highlights the viewpoints of two Native Daughters, Winona LaDuke and Debra White Plume. Both are dedicated to their communities and to the world around them. There are many Native American communities, which are currently impacted by water contamination from uranium mining, oil drilling or fracking, and runoff from pesticides, etc., which also impact all communities in these regions. In April, 2011, the Mother Earth Water Walk begins to bring awareness to the issue of maintaining clean water for future generations.

Activity Directions
Read “Standing Her Ground” pages 40-45 and the “Land on Life Support” pages 46-56 in Native Daughters. After reading these articles explore the Mother Earth Water Walk website to better understand the Native American view point about the importance of clean water. Then complete the Water Filtration Science Experiment and answer the discussion questions below.

Mother Earth Water Walk website (http://www.motherearthwaterwalk.com/index.php?option=com_content&view-article&id=50&Itemid=1)

Water Filtration Science Experiment (http://www.eeweek.org/assets/files/EDN%20Water%20Lessons/Filtering_Water_5-8.pdf)

Discussion Questions
1. Why are Winona LaDuke and Debra White Plume so passionate about protecting reservation land and water?
2. Why are Native American Elders views expressed on the Mother Earth Water Walk site important to your family and community?
3. What was the most surprising result you obtained in the Water Pollution experiment?
4. How can you, your family, and neighbors help prevent water pollution?
5. Share an issue from the “Do You Know…?” section from the Clean Water website. What are the implications for the future?

Assessment/Evaluation
1. Notes about 5 types of water pollution and vocabulary.
2. Participation in class discussion about water pollution issues, both from the Native American point of view and person point of view.
3. Completion of scientific process, observations, results, and conclusions.

Enrichment Ideas
1. Trace Your Watershed: Arrange a trip to your water treatment plant and find out more about you’re the source of your water. Trace your watershed. Use the information to create a Prezi presentation about post it on your school website.
2. Take Action: The Natural Resources Defense Council is attempting to stop federal lawmakers from passing a bill that will exempt all pesticide applications in or near water from the Clean Water Act. Using the information on the website below, write a personal or class letter to your senator expressing your views. https://secure.nrdc.org/site/Advocacy?cmd=display&page=UserAction&id=2309
3. What Are Your Thoughts?: An underground oil pipeline is proposed that will cross the Ogallala Aquifer, a vital underground water source for the High Plains System of the United States. In the event of an oil spill, the main source of water for a large populace group in five states could become contaminated. Develop a poster showing the pros and cons involved in balancing commercial interests and water safety?
4. The following website provides many different ideas for how to further extend this lesson to learn more about protecting our water resource: http://www.chewonki.org/cleanwater/water_pollution.asp.
ACTIVITY 1
2. What is a Green-Color job, exactly? (http://www.time.com/time/health/article/0,8599,1809506,00.html)
3. Write an entry in reaction journal after reading the article.

Discussion questions
1. Why is the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation referred to in the “Waiting for Their Second Wind” article as the “Saudi Arabia of wind?”
2. What kind of green job specialist would be able to help the radio station solve their problem?
3. The story mentions that “the reservation’s grid system can handle only a limited electrical output. How could this hinder development of wind power?”

ACTIVITY 2
This activity is based on the inquiry research model. The suggested model is the Stripling Model of Inquiry available to view and print (http://www.loc.gov/teachers/tps/quarterly/0907/pdf/StriplingModelofInquiry.pdf) however teachers can use another inquiry model. Students are to pretend they are a career counselor and using the information they gather, make a brochure to encourage other students to go into a specific green career.

1. Give the students two minutes to write down a list of “green jobs.” The students will then share their list with the group and they will be compiled on the board.
2. Students should then develop questions to guide their research.
3. Students should then access and explore the following O*Net Resource Center (http://www.onetcenter.org/green.html). This site has a list about green economy jobs. This information can be used to add to the jobs list. Another effective resource to explore the Bureau of Labor Statistics Occupational Outlook Handbook (http://www.bls.gov/oco/). Students should choose a job.
4. Students should take notes in whatever they prefer. Suggestions include online tools such as Evernote, or pen and paper. These notes should then be used to create a brochure to advertise this green job.
5. Students will then share their brochure with the class.
6. Have the students complete a reaction journal entry after the presentations.

Discussion Questions
1. What was the most surprising thing you learned in your research?
2. After listening to the presentations, what jobs stood out for you personally?
3. What colleges in your area have programs highlighting the jobs you are thinking of pursuing?

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Teacher observations of research process, student notes and teacher evaluation of the student brochure. A sample rubric for the brochure is in the Appendix.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Contact a professional in a green job and interview him/her about the opportunities available in his/her field.
2. Invite a green job professional to your classroom to give a presentation and ask questions.

RESOURCES
2. 10 Great Green Opportunities (http://www.emagazine.com/archive/3945)
ACTIVITY 1 Read “Bringing Life to Words” (pgs. 58-63 of Native Daughters). While reading, answer the comprehension questions (worksheet in the Appendix). answer teh discussion questions after reading the article.

Discussion Questions
1. On page sixty-three of Native Daughters, Sneve mentions how publishers think that their readers only want to read stories about Indians that ride horses, hunt buffalo and live in tipis. Why do you suppose the publishers think that their readers prefer these types of stories over ones that depict the modern life of Native Americans?
2. Were you surprised that it was Sneve’s teacher who had first taught her about the way that the United States government had mistreated native people? Why does this surprise/not surprise you? Why do you think the teacher was the first to tell her such things, as opposed to family or community members?
3. The last paragraph of “Bringing Life to Words” states that because of Sneve girls on the Rosebud Indian Reservation now know that they can write books and have them published, and in general that they can be strong, persevere and fulfill their dreams. Do you agree with this statement that her actions will have this big of an impact on the girls of the Rosebud Indian Reservation? Why or Why not?
4. Consider the conditions on Rosebud Indian Reservation. What types of obstacles do you think may have made it difficult for Virginia to go so far in her education and career? (Be sure the students come up with specific answers) How do you think she was able to overcome these obstacles? (Again, make sure the students identify concrete but simple strategies).

ACTIVITY 2
Review what has been learned about Virginia Driving Hawk Sneve to refresh the students’ memories. Also look to the following resources for more information:

- http://voices.cla.umn.edu/artistpages/sneve_virginia_driving_hawk.php

Students will demonstrate what they have learned about Virginia Driving Hawk Sneve by creating on paper a mock Facebook profile for her. Your students should be familiar with the concept of a Facebook profile. Their profiles must include: name, place of birth, current city, educational background, employment history, family, interests, a short bio. Include what they speculate she would feel her own greatest accomplishment is. Give students time to be creative. The idea is to make it look like an authentic Facebook profile but most importantly the goal is to demonstrate the knowledge they have learned about Virginia Driving Hawk Sneve.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Use the mock Facebook profile that the students are creating to assess their depth of knowledge of Virginia Driving Hawk Sneve. Of course it is important that the facts they incorporate into the profile is important. Just as important as the facts is the attempt by the students to “get into Sneve’s head” and discuss her life as though they are. Look for each bio to reflect the student’s attempt to incorporate Sneve’s values and personalities into the passage.
LESSON 2: ONCE UPON THEIR TIME

ACTIVITY 1 Read “Once Upon Their Time” (pages 66-71). While reading, answer the comprehension questions. Discuss the following questions after reading the article.

Discussion Questions
1. This article discusses modern stories as well as traditional stories. Do you think one is more important than the other? Why?
2. Read Joy Harjo’s quote on page 70. What does she mean by this? Do you agree? Why?
3. Read Leslie Marmon Silko’s quote on page 70. Do you agree with what she said? Why?
4. Also on page 70, Paula Gunn Allen said she did not realize her mother was teaching her who she was through the stories she told. Think about your own life. Can you think of ways you were taught who you were through stories without realizing it at the time?

ACTIVITY 2 INVESTIGATING TRADITIONAL STORIES This activity will expose students to various Native American stories. Pick and choose which ones you expose your students to to best fit their tribes of their area or own background. Story selection will also depend on time constraints, maturity level of your students and life experiences of your students.

1. There are many stories available on the last two links. Some are short and some are long. Pick the ones you think your students will respond to the best.
   a. Modern story by Virginia Driving Hawk Sneve (http://www.nexuslearning.net/books/holt602/Collection%202/medicine%20bag.htm)
   b. Modern short stories that are good examples of humorous stories (http://www.spottedeagle.com/jokes.htm)
   c. Short documentaries which are examples of modern storytelling (http://www.youtube.com/user/UrbanRezProductions#p/u)

2. As your students read and watch these stories, consider the following:
   a. What type of story is this?
   b. What is this story trying to teach?
   c. Do you know any similar stories or know stories that teach the same things?

ACTIVITY 3 STORY WRITING AND ORAL STORY TELLING
1. Students will write a story that either teaches the other students about the origin of something in their own life, teaches others a valuable life lesson or is humorous and meant to entertain. These stories that your students will create are meant to be derived from the student’s own personal and family backgrounds. This is a good opportunity to teach reverence for the cultures of others as well as appropriate levels of pride in one’s own background. TEACHER NOTE: It is important here to clarify that students are not to write an “imitation Native story.” Stories that imitate Native origin stories or Native teaching stories can become novelties at best and at their worst can be mocking tales that perpetuate ignorance and stereotypes.

2. Once these stories are complete and have been edited and revised, students should present these stories to one another in class. Follow the traditional way of telling stories by having students sit in a circle either in chairs or on the floor, whichever is more comfortable. Students should tell their stories orally as much as possible. When a story is told by reading it off of a paper, the author loses connection with the audience, and the story can easily become stale and lose its life. Students should keep his or her story to a length that is able to be retold from memory. It is acceptable for the student’s oral interpretation to differ slightly from the written version as long as the message is not changed.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION For language arts purposes it may be helpful to assess this story on two levels. Grammar, mechanics and punctuation can be assessed in the written form of the story. The oral presentation of the story should be judged for appropriate pacing, volume and inflection. Engaging the audience and transmitting the intended message is key.

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES
1. Circle of Stories uses documentary film, photography, artwork and music to honor and explore Native American storytelling: http://www.pbs.org/circleofstories/
Lesson Objectives
This lesson uses the Lakota story of the White Buffalo Calf Woman to introduce the idea of Native origin stories. Each native culture has its own origin stories. These stories can teach the people where they came from, where their culture came from and in some instances both. The story of White Buffalo Calf Woman tells how the Lakota received their religion and way of life from the creator through the White Buffalo Calf Woman. The second activity allows students to choose a native origin story from another native culture and to present this story to the class.

Curriculum Integration
Language Arts, Social Studies

Materials Needed
- Native Daughters magazine
- Internet access
- Display computer content on screen

Nebraska State Standards
Language Arts 8.1.4, 8.1.6, 8.2.1, 8.2.2, 8.3.1, 8.3.2, 8.3.3, 8.4.1, 12.1.4, 12.1.6, 12.2.1, 12.2.2, 12.3.1, 12.3.2, 12.3.3, 12.4.1
Social Studies 8.1.1, 12.1.4

Activity 1
Read the introductory article “White Buffalo Calf Woman” (page 71). This will give the students some background knowledge of the story and allow them to understand it more fully. Watch and listen to Chief Arvol Looking Horse of the Lakota tell the story of the White Buffalo Calf Woman (http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PHqVdZmpRgI&feature=related). Read the written version of the White Buffalo Calf Woman (http://onewhitehorsestanding.com/resources/stories/white-buffalo-calf-woman.htm).

Answer these questions after watching the video.
1. Who did the White Buffalo Calf Woman first appear to?
2. What happened when she appeared to them?
3. Did she appear again? What happened that time?
4. White Buffalo Calf Woman spoke directly to the women at one point and to the children at another time. What did she tell them?

Discussion Questions
1. What stands out to you about this story?
2. Do you see any ideas in this story that are similar to other religions? Which ones? Why do you think these similarities exist?
3. Native people of nations other than the Lakota have also looked to this story for important lessons. Why do you think this is?

Activity 2
Students will study other native origin stories, learn them and present them to the class. Your students’ presentations should be heavy on visual aids. Suggested ideas include: a picture that represents the entire story, a graphic novel, graphic animation, etc. are some suggestions. The student’s presentation should demonstrate an understanding of the story and what it explains. A short write up about the presentation and how it relates to the story is one option for demonstrating this understanding. Link to a website containing many different native creation stories (http://www.indigenouspeople.net/legend.htm).

Assessment/Evaluation
Assess students on their ability to accurately and creatively communicate the story of their choice. An element of the accuracy portion should include appropriate portrayal of the culture whose story is being told. Not all native cultures hunted buffalo or lived in tipis. The Iroquois lived differently than tribes from the southwest and these lifestyles should be accurately portrayed in the presentation of the story.

1. Circle of Stories uses documentary film, photography, artwork and music to honor and explore Native American storytelling: http://www.pbs.org/circleofstories/
LESSON 1: WOMEN OF MEDICINE IN HISTORY

BACKGROUND INFORMATION:
Susan La Flesche Picotte was the first Native American woman to become a licensed doctor in the United States in 1889. Elizabeth Blackwell was the first woman doctor ever licensed in the United States in 1849.

ACTIVITY 1 Have students read the articles and fill out the bookmark sections to be used for future discussion.

ACTIVITY 2 Create a Venn diagram or a 3 Tab Foldable© to list facts/impressions/characteristics, contributions to medicine, etc of each woman and then things that they had in common.

ACTIVITY 3 Discuss the bookmark notes that students created and use them to start a class discussion regarding issues that faced both Susan & Elizabeth.

ACTIVITY 4 Write a letter to yourself - describing the legacy that you want to leave behind.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION Should be determined by teacher.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS
1. Name some of the issues faced by one or both of these women.
2. Are there similar issues today?
3. How do they affect you?
4. What motivated these women?
5. Are there personal characteristics that you admired and if so name them.
6. How would you feel if you had been in their situations?
7. What legacy did they leave behind them?
8. What legacy will you leave?

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Create own videos about the legacy that they want to leave.
2. Create videos/posters/Presentation about these two women or others who have contributed to scientific history.

Dr. Susan (La Fleshe) could very well emerge as one of the more notable heroines in American history.

Dennis Hastings
Omaha tribe historian

“Dr. Susan (La Fleshe) could very well emerge as one of the more notable heroines in American history.”

LESSON OBJECTIVES
This lesson also is call to action on what legacy students want to create. Students will
- contrast and compare two important women to the history of medicine: Susan La Flesche Picotte and Elizabeth Blackwell.
- discuss the obstacles and issues of the women’s lives and how they are similar/dissimilar to those today.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION Native Americans have used multiple healing practices, and they are promoted to help with a variety of ills. Some of the most common aspects of Native American healing include the use of herbal remedies, purifying rituals, shamanism and symbolic healing rituals to treat illnesses of both the body and spirit. Herbal remedies are used to treat many physical conditions. Practitioners use purifying rituals to cleanse the body and prepare the person for healing. Shamanism is based on the idea that spirits cause illness, and a Native American healer called a shaman focuses on using spiritual healing powers to treat people. Symbolic healing rituals, which can involve family and friends of the sick person, are used to invoke the spirits to help heal the sick person.

Healers may include shamans, herbalists, spiritual healers, and medicine men or women. Many Native Americans visit their healers for spiritual reasons, such as to seek guidance, truth, balance, reassurance, and spiritual well-being, while still using conventional medicine to deal with “white man’s illness.” However, they believe that the spirit is an inseparable element of healing.

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Have students divide their paper in half and draw their idea of how a doctor and a native healer would appear.
2. One the backside of the paper- again divide paper in half listing characteristics, job skills and some knowledge that someone should possess who is a doctor and someone who is a healer.
3. When finished compare and contrast lists. Are there similar characteristics, obvious differences, etc. Discuss any misconceptions that students may have regarding these vocations. Also you might want to address any stereotypical drawings and why they might be misleading, etc.
4. Have students read the article Healthy Balance and fill in bookmark sections for future use and discussion.
5. Based on the diagram on page 81 of Native Daughters conduct a discussion on Western vs Native medicine. (Review diagram for accuracy.) Are there advantages/disadvantages to either Western or Native medicine?
6. Is there a place for both? How is that possible and what would it look like? Is it possible for this to happen? What is the definition of hozho?

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. To make use of ethnobotany materials to further explore plants and some of their native uses as a tie to science, social studies and native medicine.

LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will
• create awareness of local public health issues through media.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION
Science, Language Arts, Public Health

MATERIALS NEEDED
• Native Daughters magazine pgs. 78-84, “Finding a Healthy Balance”
• Flip camera or video camera
• Tape recorder
• Poster board
• Other media
• Handout: Bookmark

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS
1. Which health issue impacts your community?
2. Why did you choose this topic?
3. Where would you find this health information?
4. Why do you think the community should be aware of this information?
5. Do you think people in the community will gain a better understanding of this health issue from your work?
6. Do you feel other communities may benefit from this information you have created?

VOCABULARY WORDS
• Hozho
• Epidemiologist
• Epidemiology

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
Public health covers a vast array of topics: clean water, brushing your teeth, good nutrition, disease prevention, washing your hands, etc. Have your students poll members of the community to see what they see as public health issues that are not being addressed.

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Have students read the Healthy Balance article from Native Daughters. Pgs 78-84.
2. Complete the Healthy Balance book mark to summarize information for future use and discussion.
3. Choose a topic from those listed in the article or choose another topic to create a commercial, public service announcement or poster regarding a public health issue in your own community. Obviously, students could use other media formats as available.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS
1. What constitutes public health?
2. What issues are there today that may have not been in the past and vice versa?
3. What public issues might be in our school?
4. What issues are in our community?
5. How would Dr. Yvette Robideaux approach those local problems?

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Utilize a rubric focusing on understanding problem, strength of the message, media appropriateness, and persuasiveness.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. If your school has a television station or radio station you could have students make public service announcements. If you have no TV outlet, consider posting the video to You Tube or giving it to the nearest community TV station. Also, consider other media, such as radio or newspaper/magazine advertisements.
2. Have students create posters or advertisements for public health issues from the past, such as bubonic plague, cholera, typhoid, etc.

Traditional Native Americans try to live in a way that exemplifies the virtues taught to them from birth. The basic four are generosity, courage, respect and wisdom. In present day they have expanded to include perseverance, humility, honor, love, sacrifice, truth, compassion, bravery, and fortitude. Components: story of strength of fighting injustice and abuse, experience in sweat lodge. Darla also sings/interprets a Lakota warrior song of a woman who has served in uniform of different kinds.

LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will:
• identify parts of language.
• analyze and examine gender roles.
• discuss cultural differences of women in uniform.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
This article (pg. 94) is based on women serving their country and their communities. The first two activities will assess their prior knowledge to information gained from this lesson. This will be used in the Venn diagram in the middle of the lesson. After the “What is a Warrior?” activity, you might wish to discuss service, and the many different uniforms people wear to serve others. Some service is performed without uniforms and sometimes service is not produced in organized groups, but from individuals who respond to needs in their community.

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Fill out assessment of Gender Role worksheet in class from the student folder.
2. Before students read the article: Defending Their Country, have students write answers to the following:
   • Describe your idea of a warrior.
   • Describe their physical and mental characteristics.
   • What is the purpose and functions of a warrior?
   • Name several famous warriors.
3. How is gender reflected in your answers?
4. After answers are completed, have students share in small groups their ideas.
5. Begin part A of Venn Diagram on a sheet of notebook paper. Students read the article about Lisa Jendry on page 94. On website, there also are three interviews of Native women who have served in the military (http://cojmc.unl.edu/nativedaughters/warriors/native-american-women-find-cultural-grounding-in-u-s-military).
6. In small groups, have students answer the questions again and compare and contrast their answers to their previous ones.
7. Do part B of Venn diagram.
8. Finish part C of diagram by placing items that are in both circle into the intersection of the two circles.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION This lesson is based on participation and group involvement. Teacher should go among the groups and check on the progress of groups. Group presentation is another assessment tool.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Watch Native American Military funeral slide show with sound (http://www.slideshare.net/BoxDoc/awakeforanindianwarrior1).
2. Read the Rolling Stone article about Lori Piestewa, Hopi, and first woman killed in the Iraq War (http://www.oshadavidson.com/Piestewa.htm).
3. Have students research the names of helicopters and identify those which are named after Native American nations. Thought questions regarding the naming of military helicopters with Native American nations. Pass out helicopter Names Worksheet
   • How is Native American Culture used in military names of helicopters?
   • What is the significance of naming military machinery after a nation?
   • What conflicts occurred between the U.S. military and these nations in the past?
   • Find options for listing of military helicopters (http://www olive-drab com/od_mvg_ vehicle_id_helicopters php).
4. Native American artist John Hitchcock grew up near a military base in Oklahoma. Military operations are often a focus of his artwork and are linked with the inherent conflict it that has always existed between Nations the U.S. military. Through Hitchcock’s work, he notes that many of the U.S. military helicopters, for example, are named after several indigenous nations: Kiowa, Lakota, Iroquois, Chinook, Blackhawk, and Apache. Examine Hitchcock’s work Expansion and discuss the contrasts and conflicts that exists in his expression. Be sure to cite your research of past conflicts, to support your analysis of Expansion (https://mywebspace.wisc.edu/jhitchcock/hitchcock/expansion.html).

LESSON OBJECTIVES
(from VisionMaker resource guide)
Students will
• learn about the history of the White Mountain Apaches, the resources and perils of living in a mountainous forest region and the experiences of women on the Apache 8 Wild lands fire crew.
• explore what it takes to accomplish goals, how stereotypes and biases may get in one’s way, and what resources and steps are needed to be successful.
• analyze the role of ceremonies and the importance of being part of a community in self-determination.
• apply ideas about strength in character, determination and dedication to their own lives.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
The Apache 8 is a group of women from the White Mountain Apache tribe who fight fires. They have been in the national news numerous times as they fight large forest fires. They recently were featured in a documentary on PBS stations across the U.S. This lesson will introduce the Apache 8, demonstrating their courage, camaraderie and determination to work as a team to conquer forces of nature.

ACTIVITY DIRECTIONS
1. Video available
   a. Watch video of Apache 8 (Native Women Firefighters).
   b. Complete handouts instruction available with the movie.
2. Video not available
   a. Research articles on the Internet about Apache 8.
   b. Recent news coverage of Apache 8 fighting fires in the southwest in the summer of 2011 http://video.pbs.org/video/2006599346/
   c. Optional sources: Use news articles from this website. Scroll to the bottom under “In the News” and click on the title and it will link to the site. (http://www.nativetelecom.org/apache8)
3. Create action figures
   a. Create and name an action figure include sketch.
   b. Compose a list of accessories that your figure will need to fight fires.
   c. Write a short biography about your action figure firefighter, including the importance of spirituality and character traits as viewed in film or internet research.
   d. Write a thirty second commercial trying to market your figure to the public.

LEADERS | LESSON 1: IDENTIFYING AND DEVELOPING LEADERSHIP SKILLS

“Somehow, I think deep inside of us, we have a huge desire to be Indian again.”

—Cecelia Fire Thunder
Former Oglala Lakota President

BACKGROUND INFORMATION Many qualities are required of a strong, positive leader. In this lesson, students will identify and define these qualities and research what makes a strong leader. They will also demonstrate their ability to persuade others through speech.

ACTIVITY 1 Define leadership
1. Ask students what qualities a leader needs to possess.
2. Give each student a leadership term from the list provided. Have the student research these terms and determine why good leaders need these qualities.
3. Students create a flashcard that has a picture, symbol or drawing on the front that represents a researched quality. The back has a description and reason for the quality.

ACTIVITY 2 Read “Igniting Controversy,” pages 102-107. Review the comprehension and discussion questions with your class.

Comprehension Questions
a. Describe Cecelia Fire Thunder’s plan to mitigate debt for the Oglala Sioux Tribe?
b. Why did Fire Thunder want to build an abortion clinic on the Pine Ridge Reservation?
c. Why does Cecelia say about Catholic boarding schools?

Discussion Questions
a. Cecelia Fire Thunder is committed to women’s rights. What was the main concern regarding the women of Pine Ridge? How does she feel about it?
b. Why would her advocacy of women’s rights lead some to brand her as radical?
c. What do you think she means when she says “We want to be Indian again?”
d. Fire Thunder generated more controversy besides her stand on abortion. What were her other controversial acts? Which issue most led to her impeachment?
e. Do leaders need to be controversial? What are qualities for a good leader?

ACTIVITY 3 Self-assess your leadership.
1. Have students complete a self-assessment of their leadership skills. One example can be found at http://www.nwlink.com/~donclark/leader/survlead.html/.
2. Discussion questions: Using the handout in the appendix, discuss the qualities of leaders, connotations of terms used to describe leaders, and the differences between being a leader and having authority.

ACTIVITY 4 Research activity.
2. Have each student select a contemporary or historical leader (some should be poor or dictatorial leaders).
3. Using what they have learned, the students will determine the qualities this person had than elevated them to leadership status.
4. The students will each create a campaign poster for their leader. The poster will advertise the person’s leadership qualities. It should include a picture of the person, 1 or 2 quotes, and 3 or 4 things he/she is known for.
5. The student will explain either in writing or orally the positive or negative impacts of the leader he/she researched.

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION:
1. Prepare and present a persuasive speech.
2. Students will demonstrate what they learned about leadership by preparing and presenting a persuasive speech. The topic should be about an issue they strongly believe in or a controversy.

RESOURCES

LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will
• define leadership qualities
• self-assess their own leadership skills
• identify leaders (positive or negative) and describe what qualities they have that make them leaders.
• prepare and present a persuasive speech to demonstrate their leadership skills.

CURRICULUM INTEGRATION
Social Studies, Language Arts, Government, Psychology, Guidance/Career Education

MATERIALS NEEDED
• Native Daughters magazine, self-assessment quiz (link)
• Internet access
• Materials to create posters (i.e.-poster board, markers, etc.)

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS
1. What are the qualities of a good leader?
2. How are good leaders defined? Self? By others? Through their actions?
3. Are leaders born or made?
4. How do some people who do not project ethical standards become leaders?
5. Why is the power of persuasion important to leadership?

NEBRASKA STATE STANDARDS
Language Arts
5.2.1, 5.2.1, 5.3.3, 5.4.1, 12.2.1, 12.3.1, 12.3.3, 12.4.1
LESSON OBJECTIVES
Students will
• identify differences between matriarchal/patriarchal societies.
• compare and contrast women’s duties in the different societies.
• discuss the importance of the roles of Native American Women.
• identify reasons for decline in leadership by Native American women.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION
For the novice teacher or those not familiar with historical Native American family structure, we recommend Waterlily by Ella Deloria or The Birchbark House by Louise Aldrich as personal reading prior to taking on this lesson in the classroom. Students and teachers need to know the qualities of a leader and the traditional roles of Native American women in matriarchal and patriarchal societies. Some matriarchal tribes are: Seneca, Cayuga, Onondaga, Mohawk, Tuscarora, Cherokee, Choctaw, Navajo, Apache, and Shoshone. Some patriarchal tribes are: Nez Perce, Lakota, Cree, Winnebago, Omaha, Blackfeet, Ojibwa, Hidatsa, Cheyenne, and Mandan.

ACTIVITY 1
1. Ask the meanings of matriarch/patriarch. If they don’t know, have a discussion and help them understand the meanings of the terms. Ask them how they think the terms would tie into Native American tribes and their belief systems. (Students will discuss that in matriarchal tribes the people identify themselves through their mother’s line and in patriarchal tribes people identify themselves through their father’s line).
2. Ask students which their culture practices. (How students answer will depend on ethnic affiliation as well as personal issues. Some will say patriarch because they have their father’s last name; but accept any answer with sufficient explanation).
3. Assign partners and assign each pair two tribes; one matriarchal and one patriarchal tribe. Use any system that works best for getting partners/tribes.
4. Tell each pair they have two class periods to research their tribes, identify which is matriarchal and which is patriarchal, list duties of women in each tribe, and find things about the women’s duties that are similar and different. These will be filled in on a Venn diagram.
5. After researching, each group will create a presentation in order to teach the class about their tribes, focusing on the items above. This can be in any format the groups decide.

ACTIVITY 2
1. Discuss the roles that women played in the different tribes from each group. What commonalities did they see? What surprised them? Ask them how they think women felt about their roles? Were they seen as inferior to men? (Women did not see themselves as inferior to men nor did men see themselves above the women. Everyone did their necessary role to survive and everyone’s role was important. A person’s job was an aspect of his or her sexuality, a source of economic and political power, and an affirmation of cosmic force and balance.)
2. Using a Venn diagram, compare and contrast the roles of Native American women with European Women. How did these differences in roles contribute to the way that European men viewed Native American society and culture?
3. Review concepts from the leadership lesson.

ACTIVITY 3
1. Read “Taking Charge” pages 109-117 (you may skip A Champion for Education on page 114) and review comprehension and discussion questions.
2. Create a KWL chart to use in this lesson. Have students fill in what they know (K) and what they’d like to learn (W). Chart can be found in the Appendix.
3. Talk about the European culture and the historic role of European men and women. How do you think introduction to these men impacted Native American women?
4. Direct students to research the impact of European settlement on Native American women on the internet.
5. Go back to the KWL chart and have students fill in what they have learned. Were they surprised by what they found? Why or why not?
Discussion Questions
1. Philomine Lakota is teaching the native language to high school students and works to restore the tribes’ rites of passage for women saying these “help prepare girls for every shock in life”. What are sacred rites? How do they prepare us for life?
2. In 1751 Benjamin Franklin wrote of the Six Nations Confederacy “It would be a very strange thing if Six Nations of Ignorant Savages should be capable of forming a Scheme for such an Union and be able to execute it in such a manner, as that it has subsisted Ages, and appears indissoluble, and yet a like union should be impracticable for ten or a dozen English colonies”. What does this tell us about his feelings for the Native Americans? What about the use of the term Ignorant Savages? Was the Union formed as a result of Franklin’s work (the United States) comparable to the Six Nations?
3. With the importance of education a given, how was it that the old mission schools could be harmful for the Native Americans? Why would the schools teach only Western values to the Native people? Does a society have to give up traditional values? What are ways traditional values can be modernized?

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
1. Using a Venn diagram compare and contrast the two tribes they were assigned. Write a write short paragraph describing what the differences and similarities are for women’s roles in matriarchal and patriarchal tribes.
2. Using a Venn diagram compare and contrast the lives of Native American women and European women. Write a short paragraph describing how these differences influenced how European men viewed Native American society.

ENRICHMENT IDEAS
1. Make a set of paper dolls with costumes depicting different roles of women.
2. create a time line of European influence on tribes.
3. Compose a song of lament.
4. PowerPoint/Prezi presentation of European impact on Native American women.
5. Have students create a talk show having as guests a Native American woman and a European male (trader, missionary, colonist, etc.) This will be recorded and shown to the class. May include advertisements for products of the time.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION With over 500 Native American tribes in the United States and each of these tribes being sovereign nations the roles and responsibilities as well as the rights of tribal people can be very confusing. The United States maintains a government-to-government relationship with each tribal nation. The term tribe is not even a Native American term. However it is used throughout federal, state and tribal government policies to refer to a group of people who have a common ancestry. This refers to those tribal members who live on the same reservation and those members who live in other locations.

- As sovereign nations within the nation of the United States, tribal governments and tribal members have a unique citizenship in that they are United States citizens, state citizens, and citizens of the tribe they belong to whether or not they live on a reservation.
- The relationship between the federal government and tribal governments is complex and often misunderstood. For that reason this lesson has been included in this curriculum guide.
- Resources containing further explanation and information are included throughout this lesson both where they apply to specific discussions and in the resources section.

ACTIVITY 1 Understanding Tribal Governance
1. Download and copy for all students a copy of the American Indian Policy Center’s Traditional American Indian Leadership: A Comparison with U.S. Governance from (http://www.airpi.org/research/tdintro.html). Refer to page 115 of the Native Daughters magazine.
2. Select the nonfiction reading strategy of your choice for reading this document. It would be best for each student to have a copy in order to highlight vocabulary words, key facts about the comprehension and discussion questions, or facts needed to complete the suggested projects.
3. Using information from the article students will complete a Venn diagram comparing and contrasting traditional tribal government and contemporary tribal government.

ACTIVITY 2 Comparing Traditional and Contemporary Native American Leaders
1. Read “Igniting Controversy” in Native Daughters page 103.
3. Complete the Learning plan idea presented.
4. After reviewing both historical and contemporary tribal leaders have students create a visual display explaining one or several of the following: a) what issues contemporary issues leaders today face that historical leaders did not face; b) how selection of leaders is different today from historical times; c) the differences in male and female leadership throughout history; d) which tribes historically had female leaders and what where they leaders of; e) which tribes today have or have had female leaders and how has this impacted these tribes; f) what made historical leaders famous as compared to why/when contemporary leaders are famous or are contemporary leaders famous.

ACTIVITY 3
After completing activities 1 and 2, discuss these questions with your class

1. Based on the article, define European governance and American Indian leadership and explain how they are alike and different.
2. How was traditional American Indian leadership passed from one generation to the next?
3. What role did cultural spirituality play in traditional American Indian leadership?
LEADERS | LESSON 3: TRIBAL GOVERNANCE AND SOVEREIGNTY

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS
1. What is a reservation? Who lives there? Why?
2. What is sovereignty?
3. Why are tribal nations sovereign?
4. How is traditional tribal leadership different from U.S. state or federal governance?
5. How does tribal sovereignty compare with state or federal governments?
6. How are traditional tribal leadership and contemporary tribal leadership the same and different?
7. Why does it matter that Native Americans are tribal citizens in addition to being state and U.S. citizens?

ASSESSMENT/EVALUATION
Students will debate traditional tribal leadership and contemporary tribal leadership by making an argument for which is more important in the 21st Century, which provides better for the needs of the tribe, and/or which teaches future generations about the true cultural values of the tribe. This debate can be completed either as a persuasive essay, with two teams debating each other, or through visual presentations prepared either individually or as part of a group. A rubric for assessing the students can be developed using http://rubistar.4teachers.org.

INTRODUCTION
In Barnga, the goal is to raise awareness of cultural differences, especially when people move from one culture to another. Participants experience the shock of realizing that despite many similarities, people of differing cultures perceive things differently or play by different rules. Players learn that they must understand and reconcile these differences if they want to function effectively in a cross-cultural group.

OVERVIEW
Participants play a simple card game in small groups, where conflicts begin to occur as participants move from group to group. This simulates real cross-cultural encounters, where people initially believe they share the same understanding of the basic rules. In discovering that the rules are different, players undergo a mini culture shock similar to actual experience when entering a different culture. They then must struggle to understand and reconcile these differences to play the game effectively in their "cross-cultural" groups. Difficulties are magnified by the fact that players may not speak to each other but can communicate only through gestures or pictures. Participants are not forewarned that each is playing by different rules; in struggling to understand why other players don't seem to be playing correctly, they gain insight into the dynamics of cross-cultural encounters. When someone joins a new group, or moves to a new home, the rules in that new place are similar to what he is used to but with some important differences which he must figure out. When someone joins our group, club, circle of friends, neighborhood, we should be flexible and supportive when he doesn't quite "get it" how we do things here.

POSTGAME DISCUSSION QUESTIONS
1. What happened during the game/tournament?
2. What does the game suggest about what to do when you are in a similar situation in the real world?
3. How does this game focus our attention on the hidden aspects of culture?
4. If you could describe the game in one word, what would it be?
5. What did you expect at the beginning of the game?
6. When did you realize that something was wrong?
7. How did you deal with it?
8. How did not being able to speak contribute to what you were feeling?

CURRICULUM RESOURCES

University of Nebraska Medical Center SEPA (Science Education Partnership Award)
Role Model Posters (http://www.unmc.edu/hen/role_model_poster.html)
Each poster set features 5 different Native American Role Models in all areas of health and science. The set includes one composite poster, five 11 by 17 classroom posters and five 8.5 by 11 teacher pages. Each classroom poster and teacher page features one individual and includes information about his/her tribal affiliation, profession and words of wisdom. The teacher pages include connections to both Nebraska and South Dakota Science standards, suggested uses for the posters, career connections, literature books and suggested activities. There are currently seven different sets available for purchase with each set containing both women and men role models. These sets would work well with the following Native Daughter Themes: Environmentalists, Healers, or Leaders.

Minnesota Department of Education Indian Education Office K-12 Curriculum Frameworks (http://education.state.mn.us/MDE/Academic_Excellence/Indian_Education/index.html)
The Minnesota K-12 Curriculum Frameworks website has 13 well developed units that are available for download in either pdf or word formats. The Curriculum unit titles are (Native Daughter Theme match):

a. American Indian Art (Artists)
b. American Indian Contributions (Artists, Healers)
c. American Indian Family Life (Lawgivers, Warriors, Leaders)
d. American Indian Harmony and Balance (Environmentalists)
e. American Indian Leadership (Warriors, Leaders)
f. American Indian Music and Dance (Artists, Storyteller)
g. American Indian Oral Traditions (Storytellers)
h. American Indian Sovereignty (Lawgivers, Leaders)
i. American Indian Tribal Government (Lawgivers, Leaders)
k. Expanding the Circle-Respecting the Past, Preparing for the Future
I. Positive Indian Parenting Manual

Montana Department of Public Instruction Indian Education Office (http://www opi.mt.gov/Programs/IndianEd/)
Thru Montana’s Indian Education for All program a large variety of curriculum materials have been developed for school districts. These materials are available on-line at the website listed above. The lessons plans and additional resources available are too numerous to mention. However, one particular suggestion is the honor yourself poster series (http://opi.mt.gov/programs/indianed/honor/).

One publication that relate directly to some of the Native Daughters Artists theme is: American Indian Music: More Than Just Flutes and Drums (http://www opi.mt.gov/pdf/IndianEd/Resources/09MoreThanDrums)

Montana Studies.org http://www.nebraskastudies.org
Nebraskastudies.org offers teachers, students, and history buffs access to archival photos, documents, letters, video segments, maps, and more capturing the life and history of Nebraska from pre-1500 to the present. One particular note is that this website offers additional information about Susan La Flesche Picotte who is featured in the Healers Theme of Native Daughters.

NWREL Indian Reading Series (http://educationnorthwest.org/resource/1112)
Twelve Northwest Indian reservations actively participated in the development of this program from its beginning. The NWREL Indian Reading & Language Development Program produced 140 culturally relevant stories written by local Indian authors and illustrated by Indian artists. The result of this work was a unique supplementary reading and language development program for Indian and non-Indian children. The materials were authenticated by the participating tribes and field tested with over 1200 Indian and non-Indian children in 93 classrooms throughout the Northwest. This series would supplement the Native Daughters Storytellers theme.

- Native American Public Telecommunications
  http://www.nativetelecom.org/education
  NAPT offers many documentaries that spotlight various historical and contemporary issues facing American Indians. Many of the documentaries featured on their website also contain teacher resource guides with detailed lesson plans as well as viewer guides that contain discussion questions about the documentaries. Two films in particular that relate to the Artists Theme of Native Daughters are Choctaw Code Talkers produced by Valerie Red-Horse and Weaving Worlds a compelling and intimate portrait of economic and cultural survival through art. Navajo filmmaker Bennie Klain takes viewers into the world of contemporary Navajo weavers and their struggles for self-sufficiency. The Apache 8 documentary that is part of the Warriors Theme lesson plans also can be found on this website.

- Using THEIVES to Preview Nonfiction Text
  "Using a strategy called THEIVES, which is an acronym for title, headings, introduction, every first sentence in a paragraph, visuals and vocabulary, end-of-chapter questions, and summary, students are guided through a preview of a nonfiction text. After guided practice, partners work together to use the strategy to preview a chapter from a textbook. Students discuss what information they “stole” from the chapter and discuss how the strategy is useful in better understanding a text.”

  This resource is included to provide teachers with an additional strategy to use with students to help them better understand the text they are reading in Native Daughters which is all nonfiction.

- The Nebraska Educator's Guide to Singing and Dancing

- Identity By Design: Tradition, Change and Celebration in Native Women's Dresses
  presents an array of Native women's clothing from the Plains, Plateau and Great Basin regions of the United States and Canada, dating from the 1800s to the present. How to use Primary Documents:

The National Archives http://www.archives.gov/education/research/

The National Archives website offers a resource guide for “Getting Started Using Primary Resources in the Classroom.” This guide may be particularly helpful for teachers who are working on research projects with students.

Evaluating Resources for use in your classroom:

Although this publication does not relate directly to a Native Daughters theme, it is highly recommended that all teachers who are going to incorporate the materials presented here or any materials about American Indians into their curriculum read this article.

Non-fiction reading strategy:

Using THIEVES to Preview Nonfiction Text
http://www.readwritethink.org/resources/resource-print.html?id=112

“Using a strategy called THIEVES, which is an acronym for title, headings, introduction, every first sentence in a paragraph, visuals and vocabulary, end-of-chapter questions, and summary, students are guided through a preview of a nonfiction text. After guided practice, partners work together to use the strategy to preview a chapter from a textbook. This resource is included to provide teachers with an additional strategy to use with students to help them better understand the text they are reading in Native Daughters which is all nonfiction.

Developing Rubrics:

The Nebraska Department of Education and University of Nebraska-Lincoln do not endorse any of the above mentioned booksellers. They are merely listed as potential outlets for obtaining Native American books. There are many other quality booksellers across the state and country who will also be able to provide you with books you may want or require.
