Is That a Threat? Distinguishing Danger From Drama in Academic and Workplace Settings with Wendy Patrick

A student's message is vague but ominous: "I'm coming for her." But is that enough to pursue a case? Do you warn the victim, a fellow student at the school? This program will discuss the factors and surrounding circumstances that will enable you to make that type of decision. Incorporating criminal law, psychological research, and case examples, this program will discuss modern methods of investigating and utilizing circumstantial evidence to distinguish danger from drama in academic settings. We will also discuss what type of conduct is likely to trigger discipline, whether the conduct rises to the level of law enforcement action, and explore alternative methods of managing threatening behavior.

Saving Sycamore: The School Shooting That Never Happened with Molly Hudgens

Molly shares the story of how she prevented a school shooting on September 28, 2016. When a student with a fully-loaded semi-automatic handgun came to her with a plan to kill people on the school's campus, he told her, "I came to you because you're the only person who can talk me out of this." After a ninety-minute intervention, the student relinquished the weapon to Hudgens with no shots fired and no lives lost. Hudgens' retelling of the event walks the audience through the specifics of the incident that took place in her office and highlights previous training that affected her decision-making process during the event. Hudgens speaks boldly of her faith throughout and challenges those in attendance to remember that every human interaction matters and that one life can make a difference. Hudgens became the first Tennessean and only the tenth woman to become a recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor Foundation's Citizens Medal of Honor for her efforts that day.
